Who says he can't be happy even if he has wind!

Wind in baby's stomach can be painful and he may become fussy and irritable. But it doesn't have to be like this with the help of Woodward's Gripe Water.

A happy baby is a Woodward's baby.

Stomach discomfort caused by wind occurs in both breastfed and bottle-fed babies, when there is a build-up of wind trapped in baby's stomach, usually after feeding or when baby is burping. In some cases, the pain can last throughout the day, causing baby to cry continually.

You can calm your baby down with Woodward's Gripe Water - the trusted remedy for generations. Originating from England, offers quick and soothing relief from stomach wind pain in babies. It contains dill seed oil to help break down trapped air bubbles, and sodium bicarbonate to neutralise excess acids. Free from alcohol and colouring, it is suitable for babies aged one month and above.

Go with a teaspoonful of Woodward's Gripe Water, your baby can be happy, even if there's wind in his stomach.
